THE SUN FOR 1881.

Everybody reads THE SUN. In the editions of this newspaper throughout the year to come everybody will find:

I. All the world's news, so presented that the reader will get the great amount of information with the least unprofitable expenditure of time and eyesight. THE SUN long ago discovered the golden mean between redundant fulness and unsatisfactory brevity.

II. Much of that sort of news which depends less upon its recognized importance than upon its interest to mankind. From morning to morning THE SUN's pages contain a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates, and troubles. This story is more varied and more interesting than any romance that was ever devised.

III. Good writing in every column, and freshness, originality, accuracy, and decorum in the treatment of every subject.

IV. Honest comment. THE SUN's habit is to speak out fearlessly about men and things.

V. Equal candor in dealing with each political party, and equal readiness to commend what is praiseworthy or to rebuke what is blamable in Democrat or Republican.

VI. Absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. THE SUN believes that the Government which the Constitution gives us is a good one to keep. Its notion of duty is to resist to the utmost power the efforts of men in the Republican party to set up another form of government in place of that which exists. The year 1881 and the years immediately following will probably decide this supremely important contest. THE SUN believes that the victory will be with the people as against the Rings for monopoly, the Rings for plunder, and the Rings for imperial power.

Our terms are as follows:

For the Daily SUN, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail post paid, is 55 cents a month or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

The Sunday edition of THE SUN is also furnished separately at $1.20 a year, postage paid.

The price of the WEEKLY SUN, eight pages, fifty-six columns, is $1 a year, postage paid. For clubs of ten sending $10 we will send an extra copy free.

Address I. W. ENGLAND,
Publisher of THE SUN, New York City.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness" and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR or Medicine.

PURELY VEGETABLE.

The Cheapest, Purest and Best Family Medicine in the world

AN EFFECTUAL SPECIFIC for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen.

Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER, MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWEL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

Bad Breath!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be so easily corrected if you will take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion and General Health.

Piles!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of all of any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR, is No drastic violent purge, but a gentle assistant to nature.

Constipation!

Should not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

Sick Headache!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is commonly known as Sick Headache; for the relief of which, TAKE SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR.

THE GOOD OLD TIMES.

BY THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH.

The good old times when good men ruled the land,
Straightforward honesty the only art,
When justice reigned, and fraud and wrong were banned.
And simple manner spoke a guileless heart—
These many men demand.

The good old times when farmers went to mill,
Their grist in sack well balanced with a stone;
When the good people had of work their fill,
The men a-field, the wives at home alone,
All tolling with a will.

There were no railways then to spoil the farm—
The jolting stage coach bore the traveler slow;
There was no gas to suffocate and harm—
A tallow dip gave light obscurely low,
And caused no man alarm.

There were no telegraphs by sea and shore—
A letter by the post-boy jogged along;
The mistress made the clothes her husband wore;
(And spun the yarn and wove it) good and strong,
They time and usage bore,

No loud machine to thresh the garnered corn—
The rattling flail the business did and well;
What music there, beginning with the morn!
Th se pounding strokes in metric measures fell
Till sang the dinner horn.

No silks nor laces decked the farmer's wife,
No broadcloth on the sturdy farmer's back;
No idle hours or lazy ways were rife;
Of moments lost in pleasure there was lack;
All led a busy life,

No mammoth journals with the idle news—
Weekly a dingy sheet the courier brought;
No churches then with richly cushioned pews—
On benches hard, the penitential thought
What sinner could refuse?

No rogues in office then to make them rich
All plundering deftly from the common store
No public servant felt the raging itch
For profit through the honored trust he bore,
And daubed his fame with pitch.

And these, they tell us, were the good old times,
The land Arcadia and the people pure—
Not given, like us to folly and to crimes;
And some regret that such could not endure,
In sentimental rhymes.

Yet we ponder on the historic page
Read letters that outlive their writers now,
How soon we learn that in their simple age,
Crime stained the soul, and many a manly brow
Wrinkled with party rage.

They had their plans their money-bags to fill;
The greed of gain prevailed, though not so much,
Since fewer lived to swell in every ill
We censure now was there, with cankering touch
To poison human will.

They had more hardships than we have to-day
The luxuries of the rich men in the past
The poor man's comforts are; the common way
Is smoother made, and life less over cast,
Whatever grumblers say.

The sense of human virtue is as great,
The sense of human vice is greater now
Than in those good old times; a higher state
Is for the toiler, whom these days allow
More comfortable fate.

Toil on, then, that the right may greater grow;
Toil on, that all the wrong may lessened be;
Toil on, to check the strong and aid the low;
Toil on, mankind from crime a chains to free,
And let the old times go.

FRANK AND FEARLESS

BY D. M. S.

CHAPTER I.

'Oh! Mr. Frank, what am I to do with those folks in the public room?'

Thus Widow Jones, in tears, to a dashing looking young fellow, who was drinking a glass of ale in her own compartment or bar parlor at the King's Head Hotel and posting house, Watley.

'What's the matter, my excellent hostess? Who are those people and what are they doing?'

Thus Frank Curtis, the aforesaid dashing young gentleman—a sub-Lieutenant in the navy—H. M. S. Smasher—ashore on leave.

'Well, sir, it's a lot of—gentlemen they call themselves; I call them blackguards—who come at Fair time from Birmingham, and they get drinking too much, and then throwing the things about as they are now. Listen, sir, at the noisy brutes.'

'How many are there of them?'

'Oh, ten or eleven.'

'Well, then, you go to the public room again, and say there is a gentleman in a white waistcoat down stairs, drinking a glass of beer, who desires you to present his compliments to the gentlemen in your public room, and to acquaint them that, unless they conduct themselves in an orderly manner by the time he has finished his glass of ale he shall be under the necessity of turning them all out of the house.'

Worthy Mrs. Jones was unwilling to expose her handsome, free-handed young guest to rough usage, but what could she do? Her own son at market, the hotel was lonely, and—. In fact, the noise of another breakage coming opportunely to the rescue, the good lady's fears for her property outweighing her fears for her friend, she hastened up stairs and delivered the message entrusted to her in as imposing a manner as she could.

As might be expected, half a score of half inebriated 'gentlemen from Birmingham,' irritated at the hostess for refusing to serve them with more liquor, laughed to scorn a message which seemed to them like idle vaporing.

'Tell the gentleman with the white waistcoat, who is drinking a glass of ale, that when he has quite finished his glass of ale, if he will step up here he shall have his head knocked against the wall.'

Having received the enemy's reply, Mr. Frank cooly finished the glass of ale, and then, with much deliberation, proceeded to the public room, which having quietly entered, he closed the door behind him. But before doing so, he had very carefully divested himself of a very fashionably cut blue surtout coat.

When the appariton of a fair-haired, blue eyed, open-faced, broad-chested, stalwart young gentleman of three and twenty or thereabouts, clad in a snowy vest and spotless linen, first made its appearance, and when it noiselessly glided up the apartment, somehow it appeared that it wasn't at all the sort of thing the gentlemen from Birmingham had been used to or in any way expected.

'Good evening, gentlemen, began Frank. 'I am informed by the landlady that some gentleman present sent a message to the gentleman in a white waistcoat, who was drinking a glass of beer, that if he would come up here as soon as he had finished his glass of beer he should have his his head knocked against the wall. I am the gentleman in the white waistcoat, as you see. Will the gentleman who was kind enough to favor me with the polite message be so obliging as to step out into the middle of the room?'

A dead silence.

'This is strange. What! no gentleman sent the message? I fear you are modest. But as I am desirous of having an answer I will request of you individually to give me a reply.'

Then, beginning at the end nearest the door, our friend put the query:

'May I ask are you, sir, the gentleman who sent the message?'

But, no; apparently no one had sent the message—at least they all denied having done so.

'Well, at all events, as I had the pleasure of sending a polite message to the gentlemen in the public room, and as I am not in the habit of disowning my words, I propose that you shall at once leave this room and the hotel.'

'Well, what then?'

The words were only uttered in a whisper by one of the party, but they were apparently audible enough.

'What then? Why, I shall in that case be under the painful necessity of taking the gentleman who refuses to leave upon my shoulder and carting him out into the road before the hotel door.' A moment's pause. 'And that there may be no delay, and that you may see I am thoroughly in earnest, I propose commencing with the only gentleman whose still voice I have heard.'

And then, with a quiet dash, our friend dexterously seized on both the hands of the speaker in question, and twisted the fellow over his shoulder, and was bearing him from the apartment, when he was met by a fine young fellow at the door.

'Ah, Mr. Jones, permit me to pass you. You find me in the act of expelling some unruly members from your mother's premises.'

'All right, sir, and I'll protect your rear.'

It must not be supposed that the gentleman thus rudely handled made no sign, or went off altogether without resistance. On the contrary, he did venture, by one very decided struggle, to remonstrate, but only one.

By a sudden and peculiar wrench on the part of his captor, a groan was extracted from his manly bosom, which spoke volumes, and he made no second effort until he was finally deposited on his mother earth—to-wit, in the centre of the dusty high road of Watley.

'I don't understand it all sir,' said young Mr. Jones, on Frank's return, 'but I've no doubt it's all right as you do it.'

Oh, its perfectly correct, and altogether proper I assure you. These thirsty gentlemen have been amusing themselves by breaking the furniture and effects—see auctioneer's catalogues—of my excellent friend, the King's Head.'

'Oh, that's it, is it? Well, out you go—'

'Yes, gentlemen, out you go—unless, indeed, any one would prefer to fulfill his obliging promise and knock my head against the wall.'

But no gentleman seeming that way inclined they all silently and sulkily filed past the two good-looking young men who stood by the door, the sailor giving each a good-natured, contemptuous salute as he passed.

When the last of the cowardly lot had left the premises, as it was already dusk, the worthy Mrs. Jones closed the outer door, and then, with many expressions of thanks and some of admiration, entreated her young guest to allow her to open a bottle of a certain highly valued wine.

'By all manner of means, my worthy friend, and we three will drink to the good health of the gentlemen from Birmingham.'

'You would hardly think it possible, now,' said the good dame, as they sat enjoying the joke, 'that any dozen of creatures calling themselves men could allow themselves to be crowed over, or, rather, kicked out—for you are not one of the crowing sort, I think, sir—by one single man.'

'I don't know that, my dear Mrs. Jones. I have known men brave from numbers, and cowardly also from numbers. I shouldn't wonder that more than one of our friends outside, threatened singly, would have shown fight.'

'The nasty, dirty wretches! They shall never darken my doors again.'

'Well, no, they are not a desirable lot. But you will be surprised to hear that one of them, the person I seated in the road, is an old and particular friend of mine.'

'La! Captain, what can you mean?'

Mrs. Jones always promoted Sub-Lieutenant Frank Curtis in moments of more than unusual excitement.

'Well, I'll tell you. I half thought I knew his sullen face when I looked at him. When I once had him in my grip I was sure of it, and you may quite depend on one thing. We have not got rid of him, whatever may be the case with the others. Singular, too, as you may think, he is not only by no means a cur, but is beside really a gentleman, utterly without principle and shamelessly fallen, it is true, but still by birth and education a gentleman. I see your curiosity is excited; if you'll come out into the open air and take the wine into your little conservatory, I'll tell you all about it.'

CHAPTER II.

'You must know, then,' began the young officer, 'that Reuben Carr and myself were schoolfellows. My father was, and is still rector of the parish in which one of our largest and most ancient public schools of the second order is situated. His mother, a widow with small means, chiefly for the sake of the great advantages of the school, had taken up her abode there, and as the little town or village, for it was scarcely more than this, contained only a few inhabitants of independent means, our families were not unnaturally acquainted with each other. The poor lady, whose notions of honor were of the strictest kind, died a year or two ago. I don't wish to slander any one, but the report was that she died of a broken heart by reason of the more than usually outrageous conduct of her unprincipled son. There was a sister—'

Here a mournful expression suddenly took possession of the narrator's cheerful features. He turned first pale, then red, and hesitated to proceed, as if he had been guilty of an indiscretion.

'But that is nothing to the purpose. Between this Reuben Carr and myself a repugnancy, an instinct of distrust, which is still to me unaccountable sprang up at once from the very day and hour of our boyish meeting. We were rivals in everything, at our books, in our sports, and I think he hated me the more that as was generally supposed at least—he was slightly inferior to myself in all manly sports. In class, I confess, he was my equal, for, in truth, I never applied myself over closely to task work. When I left school, which I did at an earlier age than most, to enter the navy, I lost sight of my friend. The last I remember of him in the old village was as the coach passed his mother's cottage. He was leaning against a fence, and as we rattled by I noticed a curl on his lip, an expression on his face and a look in his eyes which I can only call diabolical. All this was seven or eight years ago and I only ever saw, though I have constantly heard of him, once between then and now, my old and unpopular schoolfellow, Reuben Carr, till this evening, when I had the pleasure of depositing him in the High street of Watley, for I need not tell you that I am only reviving this long yarn because the hero is your troublesome guest. What can have brought him hither and through what stages of infamy he must have gone ere associating with such a set of boors I cannot guess. That there is a reason for it and that the reason is a bad and wicked one, I don't doubt. The last time, however, I had heard of him was on the occasion of his having sold or been driven from the —th regiment. I mentioned to you that he was not, and, I believe, is not a coward. On the contrary, both at home and abroad, more especially the latter, he has been engaged in many affairs, as duels are called. From none of these, as it is said, has he emerged with clean hands. I don't mean he has killed his man, though that has been the case on several occasions; but if what is said is true, relying on his consummate skill with almost every weapon, both offensive and defensive, he has traded in his capacity of gambler and voluptuary on his known deadliness at his weapons, and has not only outraged the honor but swindled the fortunes and taken the life of many young men and women of good family; in fact, his name was one of terror.

The single occasion on which I saw this man was at Naples about two years since. A party of us had just gone ashore, and were about returning to our boat when the sharp report of firearms attracted our attention to a retired spot on the suburbs of that beautiful city. On turning aside, we suddenly came upon a group of three men. Two of these were raising the body of a third, while hastening away in the direction which brought them close to our own party, were two others, in one of whom I had no difficulty in recognizing, fresh from his latest fatal affair of honor, Reuben Carr, then a Lieutenant in the —th Regiment of foot. The story I learned in connection with this tragic affair was a very sad one indeed, and so black were some of the circumstances in connection with it that I was not surprised to learn shortly afterward that the survivor on that occasion had ceased, after an inquiry, to be a member of the gallant corps which he had, as was said, so disgraced.

At this stage of the narrative, a knocking was heard at the hotel door, and on young Jones going to inquire what might be the business of the person knocking, an entire stranger replied that he had business with Mr. Frank Curtis which admitted of no delay.

A rather gentlemanlike person with a hot unmilitary air made his appearance, and on his requesting a few words of private conversation, Frank rose from his seat and desired the stranger to follow him into the little flower garden with which the conservatory communicated.

After a few minutes conversation he returned to his friends, saying:

'You will, then, be so obliging as to call for my answer to your friend's rather extraordinary demand by 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. At present I neither assent to nor decline to accede to it. Mr. Jones, be so kind as to conduct this—hem!—gentleman to the door.'

The honest young fellow evinced a much greater alacrity in executing this latter commission than had been the case when required to admit the suspicious messenger. On his return he put a pocketbook into Curtis' hands.

'I think you must have dropped it when you pitched that ill-looking fellow into the road,' said he.

'Nay, it is non of mine, nor will I have aught to do with it. Keep it for the rightful owner.'

'Certainly, sir, but to find out who is the owner I must e'en examine the contents.'

This he proceeded to do forwith. Of his two companions our Lieutenant was the only one who appeared not the least interested in the matter, he being deeply buried in thoughts of his own.

After a short interval of silence, scarcely broken by a subdued whispering between mother and son, the latter said:

'This pocketbook may not be your property, sir, but unless I am very much mistaken you are gravely concerned in its contents. See here are three letters, one of which is addressed to yourself.'

'What! addressed to me, my good young Mr. Jones? You are joking.'

'Look at them. Here they are. Perhaps you may know the handwriting.'

Know the handwriting! Could that be the smiling, good-humored countenance, those the frank, untroubled eyes on which his friends loved so much to look, those haggard features, that look of horror? Could this be Frank Curtis, the ever smiling, popular bean ideal of a British sailor?

'Good heavens!' he groaned forth, rather than uttered, after closely perusing the letters which had been placed in his hands. 'The base, heartless scoundrel! Did you not tell me that the pretty little cottage outside the village was occupied by a retired officer?'

'Yes, sir, Major Beresford.'

'What sort of a man is he?'

'He is a man,' suddenly interrupted young Jones, 'whom everyone loves. Just the man I should like for a friend in a matter of life or death.'

So saying he looked the young sailor full in the face.

The latter evidently understood his meaning.

'Thank you. I will ask you to take a note to him in half an hour.'

'The Major is an early man, sir.'

'I understand you. It is now 9:40 o'clock. At ten o'clock I shall be ready for you.'

Senator Wallace.

THE PAST AND FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY.

"THE MISSION OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY."

Senator Wallace in North American Review.

The events and progress of more than a generation have taken the control of governmental affairs away from the intelligent rule of the masses and vested it in a power as yet formative and undefined. Among these were the civil war, the creation and peculiar manipulation of the public debt, reconstruction outside the constitution, universal negro suffrage, a plethora of paper money, loose public morals, enormous growth of private fortunes, and a close connection of the government with the banking interest. Each had its weight in sapping the foundation of a government by the masses, and in shaping our course toward a different rule. Whether that rule is to be suffrage qualified and careflled, or suffrage controlled by the power of aggregated wealth or monopoly, or a senatorial oligarchy, or hereditary government, is beside the present inquiry, save as they each and all show distrust of the people, and build their foundations upon universal suffrage, debased, corrupted and denominated.

The tendency toward a so-called stronger government is as manifest as are the causes that have given it form. It is in the nature of things for governments to grow stronger at the expense of the governed; but the plain proof of the existence of this tendency is found in the opinions of the federal judiciary in federal legislation over matters heretofore within the control of the people of the states, in the modes of execution of those statutes, by which local rule, local courts, and personal liberty are overthrown, and in that ramification of executive patronage which sends its mandates to the extremities, and at will gathers in a single hand enormous contributions and unscrupulous obedience from ninety thousand paid officials. "Executive patronage will bring us to a master." A network of office holders, bound each to the other, wielding time and money and power of place to pack primaries, dictate nominations, crush independent thought and action and subordinate local control to the will of an executive who governs in the name of party, points the road with unerring certainty to the end that Franklin, the wise man, predicted. Further guide boards on that road are seen in large donations of money by corporations, monopolists and wealthy men, to supplement the power of the executive, and carry the elections in the interest of an aristocratic class who dislike and distrust the people; in the domination of employe by employer; in the marked ballot; in the third term candidacy and pilgrimage on the stump; in the National and Labor organizations, which are but over-zealous protests against this tendency, and in that ill-concealed demand for energetic government, which has been the fundamental thought of the opponents of Democracy since the days of John Adams.

The issues of 1799 and 1800 again confront the people. The theories of that day are again to struggle for the mastery. The government of the Republic is already centralized. The canvass of 1880 teaches this. The federal executive has been felt from the ward caucus to the vaults of the treasury, from the primary to the presidential election. A high federal official quits his place to take a nomination for governor of the pivotal state, and at once the executive arm is extended to his support. Marshals, detectives collectors, secretaries, and all else that are needed, locate themselves within the state, and its suffrage is debauched and its undoubted will reversed. A suffrage, first debased, then corrupted, then obedient, is centralization in its worst form. This is but one means to the end sought. The mission of the Democratic party is decentralization. Its duty is to restore the government of the republic to the intelligent rule of the masses of the people. It must teach and practice the doctrines of its illustrous founder. It must appeal to the people themselves in their own interest. It must preach the eternal truth that the individual citizen is the unit in government, from whom proceeds all power, in whom is vested all rights save those which are granted by him for the good of the whole. The people at the base, the states and the federal government each supreme within its sphere, is the system to which it looks for liberty, and it must teach that he who looks to paternal government, to centralization, or to empire looks to despotism. Care for and perfect the government, and it will protect the liberties of the people, was the thought of Hamilton. Give intelligence and information to the people, teach them that it is their government, and their interest to preserve law and order, was the thought of Jefferson. Paternal government and vigor in the federal head on the one hand, information to the masses and energy from the extremities on the other. The former gave the republic alien and sedition laws, direct taxation, federal marshals and centralized rule in 1799. The latter swept these out of existence in 1800; carried us successfully through two foreign wars; acquired an empire of territory, and governed the country for sixty years. We must choose between these two now. The Democracy must again plant itself upon the axiom. "Governments are made for men, not men for governments." It must be true to the people and aggressive in its fealty. Dominated labor must be taught its rights and its interests. Capital must see its safety in the intelligence and justice of individual rule, and not in the exercise of arbitrary will. Honest performance of everygovernmental contract now in existence, but a change of policy by which the debt shall be managed in the interest of the people and not of the creditor; equal taxation on every form of property: thorough inquiry into taxation for revenue and its readjustment upon a basis just to every interest and to all the people; no monopolies; forfeiture of the franchises of corporations and punishment of aggregated wealth or individuals, for coercion of employees, or the use of money in elections; our own carrying trade made to be our own preserve; and a divorce between government and banks, are thoughts which find place in such an issue. The cry of a "Solid South" is exhausted and impotent at last. It has served its purpose. Divided councils upon questions of administration have kept the Democracy a mere party of opposition, and concealed the silent approaches of the enemy to strong government. It will continue to be a party in opposition, untrusted and untried, it defiantly asserts its ancient theories and goes to the people for their vindication.

The Democratic party is not dead. An oxe-like, after each defeat it arises from the people stronger than before. It cannot die whilst it teaches and believes in the rights of the masses. The hour for its triumph will have come when it boldly asserts its true theories and ignores the blandishments of money, monopoly, and corrupt power. He whose interests, judgment, or teachings are adverse to the rule of the masses will join its enemies, but in his room it will recruit scores of those in whose interest it strikes, or who respect its attitude and detest strong government. The future of the Democratic party is the future of the republic.

WILLIAM A. WALLACE.

The State Legislature.

AN HONEST DEMOCRAT—SENATOR-ELECT COXE REFUSES TO TAKE THE OATH OF OFFICE.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 4—The Senate was called to order at 12 o'clock by Lieutenant Governor Stone and opened with prayer by Rev. W. A. West, of Harrisburg. The Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth then presented the returns of Senators elected, which, on motion of Mr. Cooper, were opened and read. The roll was then called and forty-nine Senators responded. President Judge William Pearson, of the fourteenth judicial district, then administered the oath of office. The most remarkable incident in the organization of the Senate was the refusal of Senator-elect Eckley B Coxe, of Luzerne, to take the oath of office because he could not consistently do so. He read a long address to his constituents in which he says that he spent money for political assessments and contributions; advertising political meetings, organizing clubs, and paying their expenses, paying taxes, clerk hire, naturalization, to men at the polls for work, etc. In conclusion, Mr. Coxe says: It may be asked, why did I spend this money, knowing the consequences. The answer is, I did not understand until I was well into the campaign what I would be called upon to pay for, and then I felt that if I should retire I would, as there was a third ticket in the field, endanger not only the success of the county ticket which I was very anxious to see elected, but also, perhaps, of the national ticket, and although in the heat and confusion of the campaign I was very particular not to contribute a cent for any improper purpose, I was not able in the few weeks it lasted to consider the whole question as I have since. I did, however, determine twice to retire from the field, but upon reflection I resolved to fight it out on the line of spending what I could honestly for the success of the whole ticket, so as not to endanger its defeat by my withdrawal, and to decline to take my seat if, upon careful consideration of the subject in the nine weeks that would elapse until election day and the meeting of the Senate I should decide that any part of the money was used for expenses not expressly authorized by law. Having made this full and frank statement of the facts, I wish to say that if I had done anything that I considered wrong, or anything which I would wish to hide, I could have resigned before the meeting of the Senate, giving as a reason my business engagements, or something of that kind; but such is not the case. I have nothing to conceal, nothing to be ashamed of, and am ready as every honest man should be to suffer the consequences of my actions. I make no claim to having been deceived and kept in ignorance. What I did I did with my eyes open. Regretting that I cannot, as I had originally hoped, be of some service, however slight, to Luzerne and Lackawanna counties in the Senate,

I am yours, very respectfully,
ECKLEY B. COXE,
Late Senator elect from the Twenty-first district.

The House was called to order at twelve o'clock noon by Resident Clerk Wm. P. Smull, and was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Beck, Chaplain of the House at 1879 Mr. Pomeroy announced that, by an agreement between Mr. Smull, Resident Clerk, and Mr. Huhn, Reading Clerk, of the House of 1879, and in order to avoid any dispute as to which of the two should be entitled to precedence, Mr Smull would act as temporary Chief Clerk. The Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth presented the returns of the election of members, which, on motion of Mr Graham, were opened and were read by Mr. Huhn. A call of the roll showed that all the members-elect were present except Messrs. Boyd and Whalley, who were dead, and Derrickson, of Crawford county. The oath of office was then administered by Judge Pearson.—Chronicle-Herald.

A NEW PAYING OCCUPATION

—FOR—

LADIES & GENTLEMEN

The Hand-some Nickel Plated New Home Lamp being introduced to the public this season, is the most meritorious article ever offered agents to make money with, is safer and more convenient than the student lamp, which has heretofore had the reputation of being the safest lamp made, it has a clamp to attach it to the sewing machine, piano, organ, desk, etc. The fear of the ordinary lamp being accidentally upset or thrown from the table, is entirely relieved by the simple clamp contrivance. It can be adjusted to throw the light just where it is wanted to suit the eyes, and can be converted into a hand-some wall lamp. It has the best argand burner, a filling indicator, and convenient match box, and its price is within the reach of every one. It has been fully tested and editorially endorsed by the Western Christian Advocate, Am. Christian Review, Herald and Presbyter, Journal and Messenger, and Christian Standard, the leading religious papers of Cincinnati, and is endorsed by the Mayor and Postmaster of Cincinnati, the agent of the American express company and presidents of insurance companies, as being the safest, most convenient and best lamp made.

There are three reasons why agents should seek such an article to canvass for—first for its absolute safety and great convenience, it is needed in every home—second its low price makes its sale immense—third it will be a great credit to handle such an article. One southern agent writes, it sells faster than Gen. Lee's portrait sold right after the war, another writes, it beats the palmy days of the sewing machine, its rapid sale, low price, and liberal terms surprise old agents. Address Home Lamp Co, Cincinnati, O., mentioning on paper and they will give you full particulars and exclusive territory to canvass in. nov.5-13w

Death of William P. Furey.

ALTOONA, Pa., January 3.—Mr. William P. Furey, late editor of the Altoona Daily Sun, died at San Antonio, Texas, last night or this morning, whither he had gone for his health. His disease was quick consumption, but he had likewise taken a fever since his arrival there, two weeks since. The parents of Mrs. Furey, who were with him, reside in Illinois. Mr. Furey had a large acquaintance in the State and country. He was an eloquent orator and was closely identified with the interests of the Democratic party.

It should be the aim of every owner of Horses, Cows, &c., to make them as handsome and useful as possible. The German Horse and Cow Powder helps to develop all the powers of the animal. It improves its beauty and increases its usefulness. It makes milk, mucle and fat. By using it a horse will do more work and a cow give more milk and be in better condition with less feed. Sold only by weight at 15 cents a pound by C. A. Klein, Bloomsburg.

CHRONICLES OF THE PAST TWO WEEKS.

1881 comes up smiling.

Ice dealers are happy over a solid north.

The Two Orphans at the Opera House on Saturday evening.

This is the week of prayer set apart by the Evangelical Union.

Dr. McReynolds has purchased the property adjoining the Presbyterian parsonage.

The net proceeds of the Winona concert were $31.10.

George Eliot, (Mrs. Cross) the celebrated English authoress is dead.

The scarcity of butter has run its price up to 25 and 30 cents per pound here.

The French heeled shoe is a very great impediment to ladies in roller skating.

W. H. House, dentist, has gone to his home in York State to spend a week or ten days.

Beautiful things to gaze upon—the bright and cheerful countenances of our liverymen.

Chicago has 110 saloons to one church. This sounds bad for the morality of the "Queen City."

Somebody has discovered that a man does not stare long at a woman, unless she stares back.

David Gross, son of Peter Gross, of this town has removed from Berwick to Lock Haven.

There are eleven churches in this place, nine of which have services regularly every Sabbath.

The time has again come around when it behooves every good citizen to turn over a new leaf.

Marshal G. Kinney, jr., has taken out letters of administration on his father's estate, in Schuylkill county.

The rumor that Joseph May was sick with the small pox proves to be false. Mr. May is around looking as well and hearty as ever.

Geo. Brown, of the Central has recently purchased a new safe. This looks as though George was doing a good business.

The jury wheel has been filled with the names of 500 citizens to serve as jurors for the ensuing year.

Shenandoah furnishes more students to the Normal School than any other town in the district.

Snow storm on the 29th ult. In many places the fall was heavy. Vennor hit it pretty nearly this time.

Our representatives Vanderslice and Knittle, and Senator McHenry were present at the opening session of the legislature on Tuesday.

The thermometer got down to zero on the 29th, and on the following morning had fallen to eleven below.

The county auditors are engaged this week in examining the county statement. It will be published next month.

A large amount of business was disposed of at the argument court which was in session on Tuesday and Wednesday.

It is the opinion of the young ladies that the Winona boys were "immense" at the hop given by the Bloom Orchestra.

The contractors of the N. & W. B. R. R. are going to board on the other side of the river, along the line.

The unusually low prices of admission will guarantee an immense audience at the Opera House on Saturday evening.

The exceptions to the Master's Report in the nuisance case of Shutt vs. Wynkoop was argued by the respective counsel on Thursday.

Wheat and buckwheat flour will be taken on subscription at this office. Honey will not be taken hereafter at any price, so please do not send it in

A friend who has just read a handkerchief flirtation code advises all men desiring to avoid breach of promise suits to wipe their mouths with their coat tails.

The parties having the military project in charge report "every thing lovely." No trouble at all was experienced in securing the necessary number of able-bodied men.

If you want to enjoy a sleigh ride and have no horse of your own, go to Buckalew Bros., and hire one of their fine turnouts. They can suit you every time.

Tom and Jerry proved themselves the champion wrestlers on the 1st. Some insist that the slippery pavements had something to do with it.

My lot in East Bloomsburg upon which is a good brick house, frame barn, well of water and out-buildings, for sale or rent apply to jan. 7, 3t. WM. KRICKBAUM.

Ned Williams has returned to town from Union county, where he was engaged in opening up new ore mines. He expects to stay here now.

In the west, in some places, the snow is so deep that young lovers, instead of going to the gate, have to climb to the top of the chimney to kiss each other good-bye.

A correspondent at Benton informs us that the thermometer was 18 degrees below zero at that place on Thursday morning, December 30th.

The meetings at the Baptist church which have been in progress for the past two weeks, still continue. There have been quite a number of conversions.

There appears to be an unusual interest manifested in the Agricultural Society this year. There are now 305 names on the roll. The highest membership for any one year before was 126.

Catharine Long, an aged and respected woman, of this place, died on Friday last of consumption. She had been suffering for years with this dire disease which at last has caused her final dissolution. She leaves a large number of relatives and friends to grieve her departure. Peace to her ashes.

A horse belonging to Buckalew Bros. cut its leg near the hoof on Tuesday evening at Rupert. The blood flowed very freely for a time and fears were entertained that the animal might bleed to death, but it was finally stopped and the horse is doing well.

The Two Orphans is considered by everybody to be the grandest of modern dramatic efforts.

Jno. M. Hicky is in town arranging details for the production of the Two Orphans at the Opera House on Saturday evening. Our people can look for a goo performance.

The Rescue Hose and Ladder Co's ball was well patronized on New Years Eve. It was a very pleasant, social party, and the best of order and decorum prevailed. All present report an excellent time.

Hon. J. P. Wickersham, Superintendent of Public Instruction, will please accept our thanks for a copy of the Annual Report of the Superintendent of Soldiers' Orphans' of Pennsylvania for 1880.

In Chicago ladies are being used by landlords to warn out tenants and collect bills. This novel idea, it is said, is proving a grand success, and it is probable that in a short time it will be generally adopted,

Jay Rial, proprietor of the Two Orphans Combination that appears here Saturday evening is also proprietor of the Majestic Uncle Tom Company now playing to packed and delighted audiences at the Academy of Music, New York,

The charge of assault and battery preferred against "Biz" Beers and a "paddy on the railroad," by Dr. David Deibler was withdrawn recently by the prosecutor, a settlement of some kind having been effected.

Cyrus B. McHenry, of Stillwater, has received the appointment of Mercantile Appraiser for this year. The appointment is a good one as Mr. McHenry is thoroughly competent to perform the duties of the appointment.

The ball of the Friendship boys was a grand success in every respect. This old and tried organization well deserves the generous patronage of the community whose property it has assiduously protected for years, and it never fails to get it.

The Normal School opened this week with better prospects than it has had for a long period. Under the efficient management of Prof. Waller this school is rapidly gaining in popularity and bids fair to establish a reputation second to none in the state.

Robert R. Little, Esq. entered upon his second term as District Attorney on Monday. He has made a faithful and efficient officer. Though the emoluments of the office are very meagre he has never in any way failed to do his whole duty.

FOR SALE OR RENT.—Snyder's tannery, located in Bloomsburg, is for sale or rent. Possession given April 1st, 1881. For price and terms apply to C. W. Neal or F. P. Billmeyer, Bloomsburg, Pa. jan 7tf

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Reuben Rouch of Rupert, who has been suffering severely, for months with malarial attacks, is convalescent. He is now able to be up and around the house, but dare not venture outside much.

Several young "bloods" of Berwick, who were unable to get off from their arduous labors during the holidays, were in town this week doing the "pretty." Come again boys!

The New York Humpty Troup, which showed here December 30th was a splendid combination. The inclemency of the weather prevented a large audience. Should they visit this place again they will be greeted by a rousing house.

Don't fail to get your reserved seat at McKinney's immediately to see the Two Orphans on Saturday evening.

A very pleasant re-union of family connections and friends, was held in Orangeville, at the residence of Mrs. John Snyder, in commemoration of the 70th birthday of Mrs. Snyder, on the 1st of January. All the children were present but two. The old lady was in good health and appeared to enjoy the anniversary e'en more than the younger folks. Three score years and ten have dealt tenderly with her, and it is our wish that the remainder of her time may exuberate in many such happy and joyous occasions.

FINAL NOTICE.

We still have a thousand dollars in subscription to the COLUMBIAN standing on our books, which was due October 1st, 1879. Persons still owing for the paper prior to that time are hereby notified that unless they pay very soon costs will be made We are tired of wasting postage on bills to which no attention is paid, but will try it once more and send a statement to every one indebted to the firm. Unless there is an early response to the claims we will put them in the hands of a justice.

C. B. BROCKWAY,
GEO. E. ELWELL.

The following notice of the death of Susannah Bittenbender is taken from the Advertiser and Mercury, of Constantine, Mich. Her numerous friends and acquaintances in this county with whom she spent so much of her life, will share with others in mourning her loss:

OBITUARY.

Susannah Bittenbender, wife of the late Henry Bittenbender, died at the residence of her son-in-law, Enos Pealer, on Friday, December 17, 1880, aged 67 years, 5 months and 4 days.

Susannah Bittenbender was born in Luzerne county, Pa., June 6th, 1813, and resided in that county until her marriage with Henry Bittenbender in November, 1833, when she removed to Columbia county and resided there until the family moved to Michigan in the year 1864. She was a member of the Lutheran church in Pennsylvania, and became one of the earliest members of the Lutheran church in Constantine. She was a person of very amiable disposition and made friends of all who became acquainted with her. She will be missed by a large circle of relatives and friends.

THE SMALL POX SCARE.

A few weeks ago one of the employees on the North and West Branch railroad was attacked with small pox at Catawissa, and as no suitable place could be obtained there to take care of him, the ferry house at the river which was vacant at the time, was rented and the patient removed there. Two men were hired to attend him, and during his illness they were not allowed to have any communications with the outside world. All supplies were carried down and left where the nurses could get them. Every precaution was used to prevent the spread of the disease. Dr. Willits of Catawissa attended the patient. After some days he died and was buried in the Catholic burying ground on the night of December 27th. Since then various wild rumors have been afloat in town and through the country to the effect that a large number of persons have been seized with the disease, it being at one time reported that there were twenty-two cases in town. In order that we might make a reliable report we have taken the pains to inquire of the physicians in town as to the number of cases, and the following is the result. There is not a single case of small pox in Bloomsburg. There is one case said to be varicloid, but even this is supposed by many to be only chicken pox, and the patient is nearly well. Mountains are often made out of mole hills, and the alarm about the small pox in Bloomsburg is a striking instance.

The Christmas services of the Episcopal Sunday school on the evening of December 27th were largely attended, the church being filled. There was a Christmas tree, presents for the scholars, an address by the Rector, singing of carols, &c It was a very pleasant occasion.

Talk about cold weather. Why, the recent cold snap was comparatively warm to what it was several years ago. On the morning of January 30th, 1873 the thermometer stood at 24 degrees below zero, and at some points in this county went as low as 30 degrees. At the same time it got down to 35 below at Milton, and 36 at Mauch Chunk. Think of that.

Mrs. John Wolf, of Bloomsburg, met with a painful accident on Wednesday morning, (Dec. 29). In passing through the hall way in the second story of their dwelling house, and while at the head of the stairs, she fell the full length of the stairway and struck her head upon the knob of the door, br aking her nose, fracturing one cheek bone and cut her face in several places. Medical aid was summoned at once. The wounds were well dressed and she is improving rapidly.

BUCKHORN NEWS.

BUCKHORN, Dec, 28, 1880.

WHAT CYCLOPÆDIA SHALL I BUY?

The following criticism by Dr. Canfield, a prominent and successful physician at Renovo, is timely hailing for our patrons. He says:

I have made a careful examination and comparison of the first 4 volumes of the Encyclopædia Britannica and of the American Cyclopædia. I did so to satisfy myself as to which was the best work. I commenced the examination with a bias or prejudice rather in favor of the Britannica, but the result of my labor was wholly and entirely in favor of the American work. In the Britannica Hall Imprint for the evident purpose of cheapening the work, by reducing the size of the volumes, the margins of the leaves are almost entirely pared away; so much so that it cuts into the very body of the full page map, and the marginal references, of much value in such a work, are half obliterated, or made practically useless by being bound in so close to the back as to be unreadable. A grand objection to the work for the American reader is that it is distinctly and entirely un-american. The claims of America are in every instance slighted, in many ignored, and in general, spoken of sneeringly. No patriotic American ought to patronize the work. I might specify hundreds of invidious comparisons but will only say that I find very many objections to the Britannica that I do not find to the American work by the Appletons.

EDITORS COLUMBIAN—Sirs: In the Providence of God I have been spared through another year, and as the year of 1880 has closed upon us, I herewith transmit to you my annual report for your many readers, and some of the many events that have transpired the past year. Truly, this has been an eventful year to us, as a nation and a people. We are at peace with all the world. Our flag is respected by all the nationalities of the earth, and we are the wonderment of the world. Nations are copying our Republican form of government (the peoples' government.) The good Lord has rewarded the husbandman for his toils, in bestowing upon him a bountiful crop of the fruits of the earth, enough and to spare our neighbors who may want; for which our hearts ought to respond with thanksgiving and praise to the Great I Am, for the mercies that have crowned the past year. The prosperity of our country is gradually rising. The industries of our country are reaching a higher scale and labor is in demand and consequently wages will advance.

The thermometer for the month of January—the lowest point 3° below zero, the highest 56° above. There were but 7 days in January below freezing point, mild weather. Thermometer for February: the 2nd and 5th days 3° below zero, highest point 60° above. March: lowest point 16° above zero, highest point 62° above, generally pretty rough April: lowest point 28° above zero, the highest point 78° above. Upon the whole this month was more like March weather with cold rains and cold winds unfavorable to vegetation. May was one of extreme heat. Thermometer for 14 days ranged from 80° to 90° in the shade, and for 5 days from 90° to 96° in the shade, and for 3 days from 98° to 100° in the shade. The lowest point was 66° in the shade. It was a month of extreme drought, no rainfall from the 29th of April till the 29th of May. Never in my life have I witnessed a drought so early in the season. It was a month of disasters over sea and land, fires, shipwrecks and railroad disasters and great loss of life. No less than three towns were almost wiped out by fire, Milton on the 14th of May, Coudersport on the 19th of May and Ebensburg on the 23rd of May, all towns of Pennsylvania. There were also destructive fires in the forests of Pike and Clearfield counties, and in New Jersey, destroying vast quantities of valuable timber with many houses and hamlets, were laid in ruins. It is seldom, fellow citizens, that we have to chronicle so many disasters in so short a time of one month. Truly, the Lord reigneth. He does all things well. June: the lowest point was 52° in the shade, the highest point was 96° in the shade; no excessive heat. There were showers to keep vegetation growing, also some storms of a serious nature, doing considerable damage. July: ranged for 6 days from 90° to 93° in the shade, and for 17 days ranged from 80° to 96° in the shade. The heat was gradual: the lowest point was 52° in the shade, the highest point 93° in the shade. August: thermometer ranged for 10 days from 90° to 98° in the shade. There was a slight frost on the morning of the 16th: lowest point 50° and highest point 98° in the shade; on whole the warmest month of the season. September: the lowest point 50° and the highest 96° in the shade. October: the lowest point was 30° and the highest point 76° in the shade. November: the lowest point at zero, the highest point was 70°; the canal closed on the 22nd of November. The latter part of this month was very severe weather for the season. December: the lowest point was 13° below zero, the highest point 52° above zero. It was a month of severe weather. During the year 1880, there were cloudy days, 113; clear days, some of them partially so, 188; rainy days, including nights, 43; snowy days, including nights, 20; thunder showers, the first one in February, April 8, May 1, June 12, July 21, August 6, making 49 for 1880. Whole depth of snow from January 1st, 1880 to January 1st, 1881, was 2 feet 11¾ inches.

The mortality within the town limits of Bloomsburg during the year 1880, commencing January 1, 1880 and ending January 1st, 1881, is as follows: Two of 92 years; 7 between 70 and 80 years; 6 between 60 and 70 years; 8 between 50 and 60 years; 6 between 40 and 50 years; 9 between 20 and 30 years; 7 between 10 and 20 years; from the cradle infant up to 10 years, 14; making 59 for the year 1880, an increase of 18 over the year 1879. As the year of 1880 has closed upon us and will go into history, and as we are just entering the threshold of a new year, at my advanced age the active scenes of life are nearly closed, and it is my desire to leave something behind me in the way of admonition to my fellow men, especially to the young that they may take heed to their ways and escape the snares of the evil one. The Bible says a man's heart deviseth his way, but the Lord directeth his steps. I have seen the young man of an open and generous heart permit his standard of duty to be pulled down and trampled upon by those who trifle with conscience and sneer at religion and talk of immortality as if it were only a harmless pleasantry. Now, dear young man or young lady, keep your conscience if you lose everything else, keep your heart pure, and God will keep you in the night of temptation which casts its shadows upon your path and under the cover of which millions wonder and fall, to rise no more. Let it be seen and known that you can face the frowns and sneers and seductions of temptations with a look that will silence the scorner, and put the worldling to shame when asked to go where you cannot go To do what you cannot do with a good conscience and a pure heart, do not hesitate to look the tempter firmly in the face and say I love and fear the Great God in Heaven and I am not going to dishonor and disobey for the fear or favor of any one on earth: I love truth and purity and am not going to soil my conscience and poison my heart by touching things that defile. I am not going give myself to indulgencies, that will embitter the best powers of life, and that make death beds terrible. May God by his spirit press home to your hearts this admonition is the prayer of your humble servant and well wisher in Christ,

JOHN SNYDER.

Deaths.

BENDER—In Benderstown on the 19th ult, Mary Agnes Bender, aged 2 years, 1 month 12 days.

An Ominous Year

We consider ourselves part of an age that if it is not altogether freed from superstition, is fast shaking off the shackles, without, we hope, any detriment to lofty religious belief; and we look back with wonder and contempt at those creatures whose minds were of the order that made them dupes of Cornelius Agrippa, of Nostradamus, of Cagliostro, and of the whole horde of men wise in the dark art. Yet in spite of our belongings and our contempt, and because this is the year 1881, the majority of newspapers published in the English language have felt that their readers had a right to see some portion of Mother Shipton's prophecy, and have given it to them generously.

Indeed, so many various scraps of this precious document have been printed at one time and another that if one should put them together it would take almost as many years as Mother Shipton lived in order to read them; and we cannot help thinking that ingenious penny-a-liners have supplied versicles to the good dame to help her out, with a noble disregard of authenticity, and a discreet knowledge that four hundred years and over are likely to render anything of a legendary character more or less corrupt and and incorrect anyway.

It is a curious document, this old lady's prophecy. But since one of the features failed to fulfill itself in the year 1820—she having declared, it is said, that London streets should be deluged in blood when the dragon of Bow Church and the grasshopper of the Royal Exchange should meet, which event happened, without the expected result, at a time when both of these vanes lay together in a stone-mason's yard awaiting repairs—since that time people have not expected so much of Mother Shipton as they once did.

"Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkle of an eye;
Water shall yet more wonders do,
Now strange, it shall be true," runs one of the quatrains in a copy that may be as doubtful as all the rest, prophesying after the fact,

"Through the hills man shall ride.
And no horse nor ass be at his side;
Under waters men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk," runs another; and although she skips the telephone and the phonograph and the photophone, she winds up with something having rather a special interest to our own generation:

"Fire and water shall wonders do,
England shall admit a Jew,
And the world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred an eighty-one."

There is many a simple soul sitting by country firesides these winter nights, reared in a grew-some faith which puts Heaven chiefly in the attitude of the angry and outraged avenger, to whom those lines have had a vague terror of possibility. They are people who were taught in childhood to expect the end of the world, to whom then a peculiarly bright moonlight spread the earth with ghastly corpse-color that foreboded nothing else, to whom an easterly storm seemed something that not improbably might have no close, and in whose quaking nightmare dreams a day of judgment was a prominent factor. They would perhaps be ashamed to tell you, but ever since they heard of Mother Shipton's name they have secretely felt that they should be a little glad when 1881 was over and done with.

Nothing to them does the word of science signify, no notion comes into their heads as universe simply to destroy it before bringing it to completion; they are only blindly concerned in their own fate in such a contingency, and they are watching the weather signs this year as they never did before. Woe betide them if this winter a brighter aurora whitens the north than usual, or sends up more crimson banners and fiery lances to the zenith! Woe betide them if a cold spell come, where long stay of the mercury below zero suggests the horrible negation of death! Woe betide them if the spring rains are copious enough to fill the brooks and make freshets in the rivers with visions of another deluge! Woe betide them if August or November gives them such a starshower as was known in 1833! From all these things dreadful potents arise, and they will not really know tranquil security again till the old year has been rung out and 1882 rung in.

It is true that some of these old prophecies are very remarkable, and, if tradition may be trusted, have often been singularly verified—and why not Mother Shipton's? It is true that nobody knows what might happen if some stray comet should come along, with a force of its own equal to the undoing of the creative purposes, and send our planet spinning away from the sun. It is true that, according to our present knowledge, it seems as if the material world must come to an end some time when the sun ceases to give light and heat—why not this year as well as that year? We can not pretend to answer the conundrum, but we can at least give the good advice comprised in the oyster saloon's sign Nunquam non paratus. And we might even feel warranted by the gravity of the situation by declaring that it behooves all those that regard the year as doubtful and ominous to put themselves on their best behavior, that they may, at any rate, all the more suitably enjoy the surprise in store for them when they wake and find the whole world jogging along in the dawn of 1882.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 when I was taken with a Violent Bleeding of the Lungs followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I is glad at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have for three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it so that every one afflicted with disease of lungs will be induced to take Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work. Sold by druggists. Take Wm. Hall's Balsam only—beware of counterfeits. oct. 15-1yeow

Disappointments Favorably Mentioned.

The world is full of disappointments, and it is overflown with stern realities. Many a tear wet pillow at night has been the resting place of joy in the morning. Many a cavern of sadness has been the anti-chamber of happiness richer than dreams ever brought us. Many a fit of sickness has been a renewing of life's great policy, and from many a grave has there gone into the world again, a freed and loving heart, trembling with its own silence with the sign of some distant dove bringing a new lease of life—a chapter of joys with sorrows and repinings omitted. Many a cold wind has blown away the heart miasma, though its blast piped right merrily for a time, and we trembled at the storm which brought us the sun. We are all born to trouble. In every heart is a safe—God knows where the key is. In every heart is some secret of life or death. In the life of every man, morn, noon and night are marked with disappointments. It is the grave of events from which spring and grow vigorous deeds. Peace follows war as shadows follow the sun. The thicker the ice the deeper must have been the water. The longer lasts the winter, the more rapidly comes the sun which starts anew the frozen current. Disappointments are the lessons of life. They are its dark background which sets forth the most lasting and beautiful pictures. Life is a forest. In it are dead trees and living ones. The one gives shade—let us rest under their branches. Sorrow makes the heart better. Disappointments renew our love. The impeded river stops not forever, but finds a new current, and like the fishing of his anger, rushes on with new force. What if you have been disappointed? Others have been. All may look cold to-day—it will not so look to-morrow. The deepest sorrows have brought the choicest blessings—the sickness of hope proved the convalescence of joy. Never give up. Never say fail! Never be discouraged. Failure is the servant and success of the child of effort. Look up. Look to the future—of this life; to the coming one. Your heart may be the cemetery of a thousand disappointments—there is room yet for lealy-boughed success to spring from and around every grave, making the blessed future a labyrinth bowers—a wilderness of joy—an ocean of prosperity—a heaven of heartfelt bliss.

Hunted Me.

A Workingman says: 'Debt, poverty and suffering hunted me for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none us have been sick a day since: and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost.'—Christian Advocate.

Advantages of Poverty.

The advantages attached to poverty in most religions are sufficiently notorious. The four leading orders of Franciscans, Dominicans, Augustines and Carmelites are all of them orders of beggars. And Beranger calls the Gospel to witness the truth of his assertion that they are a happy people. Their pleasures are at length described by the picturesque writers of Spain, by the sage who calls their life a boneless morsel, a chain of delights; and by Brome, in his "Jovial Crew, or Beggars' Chorus," in which their happiness is preferred to that of kings. And if there be still any person with soul so dead as to be incapable of appreciating at a high value a condition of life which is sweetened by pleasure and made noble by art and religion; if there be any one who is perverse enough to consider such a state distinguished less by glory than disgrace, let him look to cure his folly, as the Israelites looked at the brazen serpent, on the names of those great beggars traced by Time's finger in golden letters on the wide walls of the world, on the names of philosopher, general and poet, on the names Diogenes, Belesarius and Homer.

Messrs. Ely Bros., Druggists, Owego, N. Y. To your inquiries regarding our sales of 'Cream Balm' for Catarrh, Hay Fever, &c., I will say that it has by its superior merits nearly supplanted the use of other like remedies with my customers and is constantly and rapidly increasing its sales. Though opposed to recommending patent medicines as a class, I make this one of a few exceptions, and offer it to my friends and customers as the best remedy for its purpose that I have ever sold. W. A. Conover, Druggist, Newark, N. J.

My son, aged nine years, was afflicted with Catarrh; the use of Ely's Cream Balm effected a complete cure. W. E. Hamman, Druggist, Easton, Pa.

High-priced Advertising.

It is sometimes questioned by merchants whether advertising pays. The question will hardly bear discussion in the light of the following facts, rates for transient advertisements being figured: The Chicago Tribune, it is said, for a column a year receives $26,000; the New York Herald receives for its lowest-priced column $39,723, and for the highest $348,000; the New York Tribune for its lowest $29,764, for its highest $85,648; and these papers are never at a loss for advertisements to fill their columns. Their patronage comes not from any desire to assist the respective papers, but from business men who find it profitable to advertise.—Rochester Union.

Eighty-Five Dollars Lost.

"You don't tell me your husband is up and about again, and entirely cured by so simple a medicine as Parkers Ginger Tonic? 'Yes, indeed, I do," said Mrs. Benjamin to her inquiring neighbor, and that too when we had foolishly paid eighty-five dollars in doctor's bills and prescriptions, and after he had been given up by his physicians to die. Now my husband feels as well as ever, entirely cured by this excellent Tonic." And many a sick man might be well in a week if they would only try it.

Easy on Religion.

The bridegroom of a Waukegan wedding was a Baptist and the bride was a Methodist. They had agreed that immediately after the ceremony they would decide by chance which would embrace the other's religion. The officiating clergyman declined to toss up a cent, partly because he would not countenance such a proceeding, and partly because, being a Methodist, he might be accused of fraud if the bride won. The bride herself finally threw the coin and lost. When she went to join the Baptists, however, they rejected her because she did not believe in close communion. That displeased the husband and he went over with her to the Methodists.

With every exertion the best man can do only a moderate amount of good; but it seems in the power of the most contemptible individual to do incalculable mischief.

Ayer's Ague Cure is an infallible cure for Fever an I Ague in all its forms. The proprietors warrant it and their word is as good as a U. S. bond. Try it.

Take Care of Wills.

In the House of Lords, Lord Brougham once mentioned two somewhat remarkable facts, showing the necessity of having a safe place for the depository of wills. The first case was one in which one of his noble friends, as heir-at-law, lost, and another of his noble friends, as a devisee, gained, £30,000 a year. How the first lost it, and the last gained it, was by a will being found in a rusty old box in an old travelling carriage, and which, therefore, might have been naturally lost by accident or destroyed from ignorance. The second case was one, also, in which some of his noble friends were concerned and the sum in question was no less than £160,000. This sum would have been entirely lost to the purpose for which it intended, if the inquiries relative to the existence of a will with respect to it had been instituted in the winter instead of in the summer. The will was searched for everywhere, but could nowhere be found, until at last it was discovered in a grate, and stuffed like a piece of waste paper through the bars; if it had been winter instead of summer, in all probability when the fire had been lighted it would have been destroyed.

It does not make any difference how severe the case of billious derangement is, Simmons' Liver Regulator will cure it speedily and effectually without salivation, or that prostiations of the system ensuing from the use of drastic purgatives.

As there are many spurious imitations of this valuable medicine, take care you get the genuine.

'We have been selling your medicine for some time, and we find it better adapted to the cure of billious attacks than any other medicine we have ever used or sold. James. M. Beasley & Co., Magnolia Ark.'

A Man of Nerve.

A thrilling accident occurred at the American Iron Works, in Pittsburg, recently. While Robert Moore was at work at his rolls his catcher failed to seize with his tongs a bar of red hot iron which had been placed between the rollers. The iron twisted itself thrice around the roll, forming a 'collar.' The catcher struck the iron, when there flew off a piece in the shape of a ring, with a stem twenty inches long running off at right angles to the circle. The band flew back and fell around Moore's head, resting on his shoulders. Quick as thought he grabbed the long stem with his tongs and the white hot ring with his hand, and with steady nerve and gentle movement lifted the fiery thing from his shoulders. His face was badly burned, and the flesh of his hand was cut into the bone. After the iron had cooled he put the ring over his head.

What Everybody Wants.

It is a pleasant, reliable medicine that never does anybody any harm, and prevents and cures disease by keeping the stomach in perfect order, the bowels regular, and the kidneys and liver active. Such a medicine is Parker's Ginger Tonic. It relieves every case, and we have seen stacks of letters from thousands who have been saved and cured by it. See other column.—Tribune.

A Queer Roman Custom.

There is an odd custom which is observed by all true Romans, namely, the eating of large beans on the 2d of November. The origin of this custom is not known, but it is thought that in olden times the dead were honored in May instead of November, and that, as beans were then in season, they formed part of the feast. Now, however, dried beans have to be eaten, and, as every one does not like that food, the Church allows imitation beans. These are made of sugar and pastry, made up in the shape of and called dead men's bones. The very name is sufficient to deter many from partaking of this pastry, though it is said to be delicious, but the sight of a human bone, even when being eaten by the prettiest of mouths, is not pleasant. The custom of placing these death-bones on dining tables had the same origin as that of introducing skeletons at festivals to remind the guests that all were mortal, and that it was best to enjoy life whilst they could.

Mica is now used in the soles of boots and shoes. A thin layer is placed under the insole.

A Clock Made of Bread.

Milan has a curiosity in a clock which is made entirely of bread. The maker is a Peruvian, a native of India, and has devoted three years of his time to the construction of this curiosity. He was very poor, and, being without means to purchase the necessary metal, deprived himself regularly of his daily bread, which he devoted to the construction of this curiosity, eating the crust and saving the soft part for doing his work. He made use of a certain salt to solidify his material, and when the various pieces were dry they were perfectly hard and insoluble to water. The clock is of respectable size, and goes well. The case, which is also of hardened bread, displays great talent in design and execution.

Neither Washington nor Jefferson were speechmakers, and it is noticed that their names are venerated and respected by everybody.

A tramp woke up suddenly with a cold sweat standing in great beads upon his forehead. "What's the matter?" asked his companion. "A frightful dream! I dreamt I was at work."

Boatmen are kept at each of the three bridges at Rome to rescue persons attempting suicide.

A suburban Paris dealer announced that he sold donkeys like his father.

MRS. LYDIA E. PINKHAM.
OF LYNN, MASS.

DISCOVERER OF
LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.
The Positive Cure

For all Female Complaints.

This preparation, as its name signifies, consists of Vegetable Properties that are harmless to the most delicate invalid. Upon one trial the merits of this Compound will be recognized, as relief is immediate; and when it is continued, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, a permanent cure is effected, as thousands will testify. On account of its proven merits, it is to-day recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country.

It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life. It will dissolve and expel tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development. The tendency to cancerous humors there is checked very speedily by its use.

In fact it has proved to be the greatest and best remedy that has ever been discovered. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach.

It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared at 233 and 235 Western Avenue, Lynn, Mass. Price $1.00. Six bottles for $5.00. Sent by mail in the form of pills, also in the form of Lozenges, on receipt of price, $1.00, per box, for either. Mrs. PINKHAM freely answers all letters of inquiry. Send for pamphlet. Address as above. Mention this paper.

No family should be without LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S LIVER PILLS. They cure Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the Liver. 25 cents per box.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.
